Inspiring Optimistic Learners

Seth Doyle

Year 7

Seth has received this month's Head Teachers Award as a result of the inspirational way that he has settled into life at Torpoint Community College. Seth has begun his career at TCC with a really positive intent and this is reflected in the way that he conducts himself amongst his peers and the professionalism that he applies to his learning on a daily basis; these are exciting traits to see in someone so young and I anticipate that the best is yet to come.

Seth is an engaged, inquisitive and friendly member of our College community. He has faced up to the challenges of transition to secondary education and channelled his considerable energy into the college STEM (Science Technology, Engineering and Maths) club where he is flying the flag for the College. Recently Seth and his STEM club associates were invited to test out the new STEM education facilities at the Tamar Bridge Education Centre, this proved to be an exciting experience for all involved and the feedback from Seth and the STEM club students was overwhelmingly positive. Seth's interests in Science run quite deep, and this is evident from the comments made by his Science teachers; "Seth is passionate about Science and has been a pleasure to teach this year! Seth is a star!"

Outside the laboratory Seth is a very highly regarded individual "he always arrives with a smile; ready to learn and do the best he can. No matter what the task he tackles it with an enthusiasm which is infectious to his peers – and motivates them to try their best aswell". This is a fabulous trait to have and this is what makes Seth such a great role model for his peers.

Seth is a highly creative individual and has produced some lovely work in DT – his CAD/CAM jewellery was thoughtfully designed and challenged his skills. If Seth continues in the way that he has started here at Torpoint Community College the world will indeed be his oyster!

Seth is a real inspiration to his fellow Year 7 peers and Freathy House, and I wish him every success with his future endeavours.
